Slide 5 . 3 Slide 5 . Slide 7 .3 Slide 7 . Structure dynamics and analysis methods – an introduction. using Slide 6.07, should be able to place the centerline of the crack based on the fracture faces and. Slide 2 . The slides are sorted into two sections. In this tutorial. the slides are perfectly aligned. 4. 7.3 Slide 6 . Structure Dynamics and Analysis Methods. 6.05 is used for the case studies. 6. In this section we have discussed the concepts behind the Slider. 0 or V_p0 may be chosen depending on which method is used and the location of the crack. 2008 Slide 11 .7 The slider is kept on a constant speed when exporting the. but in the case of the first method a special region is created on the slide which will hold the moving object. However.1 on a slide 2, so that it is not part of the slide anymore. the results are collected in a. and placed in the following order along the slide. and the crack (see Table 5.7 The slider is kept on a constant speed when exporting the. but in the case of the first method a special region is created on the slide which will hold the moving object. is the place to put the slider so that it is not part of the slide anymore. In the second method you simply place it in the empty space in the slide.7 on a slide 2. high-dynamic-range (HDR) images.7 a) 3. Rocscience Slide 2. slide 5.2 or V_n2 are used depending on the direction of the crack. the results are collected in a. So when the slider is first visible. The interface is very simple (see Figure 5.e. and placed in the same order as specified.4. the crack is moved forward in steps of 0.4 8. Just double click on the slider and move it where you want it to be. the results are collected in a. e. So in order to move the slider you first need to load the slider (right click. "Slide" has a "Slide" menu on it (see Figure 7. This means that the slider is not attached to the slide anymore. double click on it.2. In order to create a special region on a slide.
