presentation (right) is a Windows 95 system dialog box. The one on the left is an English system dialog box. As for what the difference is, I don't know. Treatment of adult subependymoma of the posterior fossa. A case of adult subependymoma of the posterior fossa is described in a 16-year-old female. To our knowledge, this is the first case of adult subependymoma of the posterior fossa. In both adults and children, the tumor is best managed by total resection. The value of chemotherapy and radiotherapy are discussed. The patient has made a full recovery. However, the long-term effects of these therapies on the central nervous system are uncertain and the need for routine surveillance for development of a subsequent subependymoma is unknown.//
