out the DNS entry (either by going to the network settings / connections to un-check the DNS entry, or if you have your router configuration tools, ping your router and disable the DNS entry). Legislation to keep the hard-earned money of the powerful has been sent to a committee in California where it can be promptly sneered at by anti-union lawmakers who have no intention of repealing the law that pays for California's highways and schools. So much for the notion that "small is beautiful" and that California might have some clout in the national economy. Backers of the California Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 2013, which enacted higher payments for public schools under the guise of helping low-income children, have made some headway in the negotiations that will determine the fate of the bill, which passed the Senate and is being considered on the Assembly floor. But Republicans have signaled their intention to seek cuts in funding for the measure, which includes a provision allowing for an additional $1.2 billion for schools by increasing seniority-based pay rates for teachers d4474df7b8
