N[The connection between the epidemiological, etiological and clinical aspects of the avian influenza in the 1990s]. The avian influenza in the 90s differs in several points from that of the last century. It is produced by new strains of the virus of the "classical" type, more resistant to the treatment. All of them are endemic viruses that at present are used as the basis for the formulation of vaccines. In this paper, the authors analyzes the data about the outbreak of the avian influenza in the 90s.Q: iOS7 - AutoLayout, creating programmatically the UITableViewCell I have two UITableViewCells: 1) The first cell will have a UILabel, that will be pinned to the top left corner. 2) The second cell will have a UITextView, and I want to pin it to the bottom right corner. All I need is to "programmatically" add constraints (right, top, bottom, left) of both cells. I know I can add constraints in the storyboard and everything will be fine, but I have to do this via code because I need to use an external static library that is not set up for UITableViewCells. Thanks in advance! A: In the cell: - (void)layoutSubviews { self.label.topAnchor.constraint(equalTo: topAnchor).isActive = true self.label.bottomAnchor.constraint(equalTo: bottomAnchor).isActive = true self.label.leadingAnchor.constraint(equalTo: leadingAnchor).isActive = true self.label.trailingAnchor.constraint(equalTo: trailingAnchor).isActive = true } And don't forget to create the UILabel in the.xib.
