Delaware Art Museum __NOTOC__ The Delaware Art Museum is a museum at Delaware Center for the Contemporary Arts (DCCA) in Wilmington, Delaware, U.S.A. It has artwork by national and international artists and presents temporary exhibitions. It has six galleries. History The museum was founded in 1954 and is affiliated with the Smithsonian Institution. In 1970 its name was changed to "Delaware Center for the Contemporary Arts" in order to emphasize the foundation's overall role. Collections and exhibitions The museum's collections contain about 1,500 paintings and sculptures. With a focus on American art in the 20th and 21st centuries, the museum's main collections are notable for its Beaux-Arts, Western American and Native American art. Among its permanent collections are James Abbott McNeill Whistler's Mother and her Daughters, Edwin Dickinson's Portrait of Frederick Douglass, Alexander Calder's marble mobiles, and works by George Bellows, John Henry Twachtman, Goya and Edvard Munch. The museum holds an extensive collection of Ancient Greek and Roman sculpture and paintings, including the famous Sandro Botticelli frescoes; a collection of modern sculpture by Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo and Henry Moore; works by Picasso, Francis Bacon, Andy Warhol and other major artists; and some of the finest works by Winslow Homer and other 19th-century American artists. The museum's Collections Department houses approximately forty rare, historic and fine print editions from the Morris Louis collection, the collection of renowned artist Mary Cassat. The library also contains historical, art and text-related materials. Selected artists Many notable artists have had their works in the museum's permanent collection including Winslow Homer, Goya, Abbie Conklin, Ruth Asawa, Elisabeth Blauensteiner, Nicolas Carone, Joe Frolich, Edvard Munch, and Albert Pinkham Ryder, among others. Additional works by noted American artists include the following: See also List of art museums References External links Delaware 3ef4e8ef8d
