The Governor wants to take on the train. He would like to run for president, but with a key group of party donors warning him to "stop talking about running for president" and "stop campaigning," he is hitting the pavement. Speaking to a crowd of up to 200 supporters in Des Moines last night, one of the opening acts to Scott Walker's announcement that he would run for the Republican nomination, the governor is wowing the crowd with the power of his message. "I want to take on the big Washington special interests," Walker told the crowd, which is high in school children and farmers. "You see where they're getting you," he told them, referring to the 2014 midterms, when he saw school children being used as political props. "They're just using you." The crowd was boisterous and enthusiastic, and by the end of the speech, they chanted "We want Walker!" as the governor took the stage. Watch Walker's speech: Advice on Things to Do While you are Unemployed I know you're probably thinking that you have nothing to do, nothing to learn, and that no one's going to hire you. I'm going to change your mind on all those points. First of all, there is ALWAYS something to do. If you stop doing anything, eventually you go bankrupt. So even if you have nothing to do, there is still a lot to do. It just might not be your job. I'm going to teach you how to fill your days with other things to do. A big part of doing anything is finding inspiration and motivation to do it. If you don't have anything to do, you might find yourself watching TV all day, complaining about your joblessness. Or you could find yourself sitting around, complaining about your joblessness. The point is, it's easier to find inspiration when you're busy doing other things. If you have nothing to do, you have no one to blame but yourself. 2. Seek out online

High-quality, well-coordinated governance is critical for healthcare organisations. There is a gap in knowledge regarding the leadership and accountability of rural health organisations (RHOs). To determine the attributes and accountability of rural RHOs and the factors that influence the accountability of rural RHOs, a mixed-methods study was conducted using an online survey and a qualitative face-to-face interview. The survey was completed by 89 directors and managers from rural RHOs across Australia. Data were analysed using descriptive statistics, independent sample t-tests and chi-squared tests. Interviews were analysed thematically. Rural RHOs are governed by a board comprised of directors and managers who are accountable to the board. There was considerable variability in board composition and accountability. A lack of oversight from the board and poor relationships between boards and management were the most commonly reported barriers to accountability. Rural RHOs are poorly governed and the accountability of directors and managers is limited. Our results highlight the need for better governance and accountability frameworks for RHOs. Our findings also indicate the need for transparency and accountability frameworks for RHOs that align with broader public sector frameworks. 2d92ce491b
