A Home Ministry order issued on June 27 has stated that all illegal immigrants will be expelled from Chhattisgarh. The order has come after the Chhattisgarh government passed a legislation on June 16 to introduce the National Register of Citizens (NRC). The law stated that all illegal immigrants will be removed from the list. On July 24, Chhattisgarh and Delhi faced off against each other in a match in the first Indian Super League match. The match was watched by many illegal migrants from Bangladesh in the city of Raipur. The fate of Colorado residents whose applications for medical marijuana cards were rejected this year is uncertain as they await an appeal by the state. But the Colorado State Board of Health has become the target of an investigation by the state's ethics watchdog over how it handles medical marijuana appeals, according to the Coloradoan. The Office of the State Board of Health first began working to investigate the board in February, according to documents obtained by The Denver Post. The investigation was closed in late June after the Office of Legislative Legal Services determined that the legal basis for the investigation did not exist, according to the documents. But another investigation was opened in July by an Inspector General's Office of State Government Affairs. That investigation was closed on Oct. 16, according to a document obtained by The Denver Post. A spokesman for the Office of the State Board of Health told The Denver Post that the board will work to expedite the appeal process for rejected applicants. "In the event an appeal is filed by the applicant, we will proceed expeditiously in handling the appeal," Eric Brown said in an email. "In the interim, we've alerted applicants of their right to appeal to the Board of Health." Brown would not specify how long the board has to complete the appeal process. But the appeals typically take two to three months. "We have yet to issue an opinion as to how long it will take," he said. "We anticipate it will be at least two to three months."
