It's _ru-ru_s15_sp2-x86-en_updated.iso : Windows 7 SP2 x86-EN . The second command is: bootrec /rebuildbcd After running the second command, the computer reboots. Why is this? A: Windows 7 did not originally ship with a bootable CD. You can read more about this here In order to make this work, you need to first download and install the Windows 7 SP2 boot CD. This can be downloaded from the Windows 7 Support Site, but I would strongly recommend you download the DVD instead. After installing the Windows 7 SP2 boot CD, follow the instructions to create a bootable Windows 7 CD. Then, you will have to disable Fast Boot and shutdown the computer. When you start the computer, you will be presented with a message stating that the Windows 7 SP2 boot CD is not detected. You will then need to press ENTER to continue. After pressing ENTER, the computer will be rebooted and a Windows 7 bootable CD will be mounted on the startup drive. You can then perform a repair installation of Windows 7. Edit: There are a few other methods that you could use, but none of them are truly 'ready to use'. That is, the CD will still need to be created first. You could make a bootable USB thumb drive, but you will still need to create the thumb drive first. You could also make a bootable flash drive, but you will still need to create a flash drive image first. the trial, and that it was common for Henson's counsel to delay these discovery requests until after trial. The length of time taken by Henson's counsel to file the Rule 35(b) motion is immaterial. 12 Finally, the trial judge determined that the Government's failure to disclose the after-acquired evidence was inadvertent. The disclosure rules are intended to insure that the parties have a fair opportunity to gather and present all available evidence in a given case. While the testimony of Ms. White is material to Henson's defense, the trial judge's finding that the Government's failure to disclose her earlier statement was inadvertent cannot be said to be clearly erroneous. 13 We reject the appeal of both Henson and Schwartz. 14 AFFIRMED. * The
