Example: 1 some dummy 2 yes dummy I want to have the Type elements to be elements because they are text nodes, but I want the Value elements to be children of the Type elements. I know it's confusing so please have patience with me and understand that I'm just having trouble explaining it. Thanks! A: No. The whole point of having XML is to have proper end-to-end data storage and parsing. If you want to have some things in XML, and other things as an optional child of a single entity, you'd be able to do that outside of XML. (Indeed, you can already do that in JSON as well.) But, the XML which you have posted is not valid. If you have a valid XML document, the only way it can have nested elements is as a root element, and then everything else 3e33713323
