What is HyperMotion Technology? The result of 25 years of development by EA Sports, HyperMotion Technology will make it feel like you're playing a real-life game in the new FIFA. This is done through a combination of enhanced animation workflows and improved physics through the new data captured by the motion capture suits worn by the players. FIFA 22 was built around the player's own physical movements using a real-life, visual creation process of developing and tuning every animation to ensure an authentic gameplay experience. The technology used in the development process was a hybrid approach utilising real-life physical data captured through motion capture suits, combined with studio-quality animation workflows to build a playable game. HyperMotion Technology builds on our years of experience in developing realistic animation. Working with the player's movement data allows for more realistic animation, and improvements to the way in which players react physically on-screen, specifically in collision, tackling, aerial duels and goal decisions. You can also expect to see more ball juggling, wild dives, tricky touches and more ability to perform killer turns using the new momentum-based control. FIFA 22's goalkeeping system has also been reimagined to make it much more consistent with the running animations of the new movement engine. We believe that this is a huge advantage for goalkeepers, and it will also improve goalkeeper ratings for those who play the position. Our physics engine has been re-engineered to improve ball and player animations to make them feel more authentic and more varied during gameplay. We've added more physicality to the movements of the players, and recreated how players react physically in motion. With all these enhancements, we are now able to represent player behaviour more realistically and allow for more individual reactions. What data was collected during development of FIFA 22? We developed FIFA 22 using data captured from 11 professional players who volunteered to wear high-tech motion capture suits that capture every player's movement as if they were playing an official match on a real pitch. These players wore these suits for one complete 90-minute match. Using this data we could capture everything from how players handle the ball, the amount of speed and direction they make their movements, how accurate they are with their passing, how hard they hit the ball, the manner in which they do the physical work of defending, tackling and tackling the ball

Features Key:

- FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data captured from 22 real-life players playing a full, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits.
- Choose your Genre - choose to compete in possession- or showcase-based games of real world football skills and take on your friends on the pitch.
- Create your own World Cup experience - start your own campaign or compete with millions of others on this World-leading tournament, with the World Cup mode being available both solo and with friends online.
- Presentation - the FIFA world is brought to life through the use of X-Reality for mobile and animate, energetic introductions and robust, detailed player models.
- Targeting - improve your FIFA game through interactive AI coaches.
- Matchday - relive the action with more detailed crowd and media interaction, weather conditions and more.
 - Classic gameplay: keep on top of the key events from the second you log in.
 - Quick-fire game: 5-minute match with a cast of thousands of players, clubs, and staff on-screen at once. Perfect for Counter-Strike: Global Offensive (PS4 & XBOX ONE) players looking for a quick score.
 - Classic mechanics: the tight control fans loved has come back.

FIFA is a series of video games released annually as a fully licensed sport simulation. Since its debut in 1991 FIFA games have remained the most widely-sold sports video games, with over 250 million units sold worldwide as of

April 2012. The first FIFA game was published in September 1991 for the ZX Spectrum, Amiga, Atari ST, Commodore 64, MS-DOS, Sega Master System, Game Gear, Nintendo, Mega Drive/Genesis, Game Boy, Super NES, Sega Saturn, PlayStation, and Microsoft Windows, with the series achieving continuous sales success on all six platforms for the next two decades. EA have purchased the commercial distribution rights to the FIFA series beginning in 2005 when Electronic Arts acquired a ten-year deal with FIFA World Player. EA is exclusively handling the licensing for the FIFA series, including the addition of the FIFA World Player branding to every game since FIFA 11. The series was originally developed and published by Electronic Arts, although Electronic Arts' ownership of the series was bought by Canadian company Take-Two Interactive in August 2008. History Prior to the creation of the FIFA series, EA had released three-dimensional soccer games such as Soccer For Kids and Topscorer. Although Take-Two Interactive bought Electronic Arts in August 2008, EA retained the rights to the FIFA series, effectively separating the games from the publisher. This legal separation was ostensibly created in order to protect both new and old FIFA fans from any negative influence and EA's ownership of the series continued as a trademark. However, some publications incorrectly state the legal separation of the games from Electronic Arts as a de facto separation of the games from the publisher. In this de facto separation, the official lineup of FIFA games were still published by Electronic Arts. The name "FIFA" was neither confirmed nor denied, as Electronic Arts were contractually not allowed to use the name in the United States, and did not want to have to reveal their new main competitor in the sports game market. Electronic Arts therefore changed the series' logo to the number 21, later to be changed to the official FIFA World Football. The first game in the FIFA series to not be published by EA was FIFA 09 for the PlayStation 2. On February 18, 2008, the German gaming magazine Hobbyconsol brought up a new brand in their issue 247. They referred to the new brand as FIFA Infinity. The name was taken directly from EA's new alternate controller brand. On May 5, 2008, EA confirmed that the new FIFA game was in development and that Take

FIFA Ultimate Team is back with brand new features like a brand new Manager Mode, a brand new Player Career Mode, and brand new Dynamic Tactics. Build your ultimate squad with real-world players from over 500 licensed clubs around the globe, including actual Premier League players. New social tools and more animations give fans a more immersive FIFA gameplay experience. Soccer Mercenaries – Soccer Mercenaries is back for the first time in more than a decade. Shoot and play as your favorite pro teams as you battle with rivals across the globe. Game modes include the official FIFA Football, FIFA World Cup, Seasons, and Cups, with new World League and Pro League modes. Play with FIFA and Ultimate Team players from different leagues and countries. PES 2017's Improvements PlayPro Evolution Soccer 2017 features multiple improvements in-game design and gameplay, player skill and behavior, and online communication features. Improvements made to the physics model and artificial intelligence have given each player a greater sense of fluidity and responsiveness, reducing input lag, a substantial factor for a more responsive player motion. The ball now looks more translucent and realistic, reacting to the direction the ball is actually being moved and the collisions with the players are more appropriate. The ball behaves more naturally when traveling through air when performing straight through balls. New Attacking Formation The returning formation introduced in FIFA 17 is back with improvements. The Diamond-4-2-3 formation, which rewards you with a penalty kick, starts off with an active press-and-defend style that allows the midfielders to push up to prevent passing and receiving attacks from the other team while the fullbacks contain the opposition. Once you score a goal, the formation drops deeper, shifting the ball to the wingers to create more attacking chances. This formation adds more attacking flair to the game, with multiple passes, dribbling, and increased ball possession. Simplified Player Control Many players will find using the new System D-pad easier to control. On the touchline, players are less likely to stray out of position or fail to control the ball properly, due to the system automatically slowing down the movement of the player who has the ball. The aging factor is also reduced, as the system adapts to the player's movements. Ball Physics Engine The new ball physics engine is the most accurate and responsive physics model ever introduced in the franchise. The ball's new weight, its physics engine, the position of the ball, its movement

Q: How to close a connection in c++ I have a question related to server-client application. Can anyone please suggest me a good example to close the socket connection in a c++ program? A: Use close(). A: There are also a lot of things you can do when the connection is finally closed, after all commands have been executed, and the client wants to be informed that there is no more incoming data, or that the server is no longer sending commands. Those are the important parts of TCP/IP, so they need to be addressed specifically, in addition to the general concept of closing.

CONTACT LENSES The visual quality of eyesight varies according to the eye's length, size, shape and age. In many cases, contact lenses can help restore clear vision and eliminate distortion. Contact lenses vary in power, shape and material for every individual, although more often than not, common contact lenses correct for myopia, or nearsightedness. The power of contact lenses varies and usually drops from the strongest prescription through to weaker prescriptions. Generally, the more strength the better, however, there are different contact lenses for each prescription. Contact lenses can be used to correct for astigmatism, and to compensate for a lack of focus. Most contact lenses require either cleaning and disinfecting or a daily care regiment. To combat bacteria that may affect eyesight, it is essential to clean and disinfect lenses as required by the manufacturer. To this end, and
