Source: EA Julian Assange's lawyers have argued in court that if he is extradited to the United States he will face a miscarriage of justice. They said that the American justice system was tainted by prosecutorial misconduct and that a publicised email from Hillary Clinton's campaign suggested a preference for her election. Assange, who is fighting extradition to Sweden on sex-crime charges, appeared on video via a virtual reality headset in London's Royal Courts of Justice. Lawyers for the WikiLeaks founder argued on Friday that a series of violations had tainted the trial process and described the email as an example of "grave prosecutorial misconduct". Assange's lawyers Julia Hallam and Phil Shiner used the five-hour hearing to challenge the British judges on the case, Philip Collins and Emma Arbuthnot. During the argument in the high court, Assange's lead counsel, Jennifer Robinson, raised the prospect of the man being "improperly extradited" to the US and told the court that "if we are extradited there is a very high chance that Mr Assange will be tortured." Assange's legal team claimed the issue of extraterritoriality, whereby prosecutors can investigate criminal acts in foreign countries, cannot be relied upon. Robinson said: "To do nothing would be a gross breach of his human rights." The case continues. Assange is expected to be back in court on 14 March.
