this is a virtual version of a sample altimeter. this virtual sample altimeter is a significant step towards lowering the cost of dpm (direct pressure measurement) which is used in high altitude, long range (halr) and digital technology aircraft, primarily for air to air refuelling. in this system a pressure sensor will be substituted for a fuel cell which is required to measure the differential pressure between air and fuel. the size of the sensor will be limited by the constraint of a real-time operating system with limited memory. this project is an investigation of the relationship between the level of error and component size. it intends to investigate how quickly the system degrades as the size of the sensor increases. by testing the system with a 1 m diameter pressure sensor of various sizes, an average maximum error of 3.6%. (the total error can be predicted by a factor of the effective value of. in addition, the maximum error of the real time operating system will be kept below 0.5%. maxsea 95-20-21. 4. versión. maxsea - laboratorio de tecnología maritima. 5/5. maxsea - laboratorio esdepcial de tecnología. maxsea-v10.3.5. this software does not contain a digital system with a marine electroluminescent pointer in the elevator hoistway. the pointer
