

How to get the quests for Enraged Rajang and Raging Brachydios

A free major title update was released on Monday, March 23rd, 2020, adding Enraged Rajang and Raging Brachydios.

I had completed Iceborne and had nothing else to do so I hadn't played it for a while, but I heard there was a major update so I decided to log in for the first time in a while.

I had already forgotten how to operate the game, but playing Monster Hunter again after such a long time is still a lot of fun!

Then I wanted to go hunt the new monster that was added, but I couldn't find the quest...

Apparently, these two quests are not event quests, but rather are unlocked by clearing special missions.

For returning players like me, I would like to explain how to unlock the quests for [\[Furious Rajang\]](#) and [\[Raging Brachydios\]](#).

How to complete special missions

As a prerequisite for unlocking the newly added quests for Rajang and Brachydios, you must have seen the Iceborne ending.

After the ending, a new special mission will be added.

Here's how to complete the special missions.

You can progress through quests by talking to people in Seliana who have a purple exclamation mark above their heads.

At the beginning, you can progress through the quest by talking to the Grand Commander.

We will explain the order in which you need to complete the special missions to unlock the quests for [Furious Rajang] and [Raging Brachydios].

If you hunt Kirin, Rajang, and then Subspecies Zinogre in order from top to bottom, the newly added quests [Enraged Rajang] and [Raging Brachydios] will be unlocked.

The quest names are [Golden Rakshasa] for Rajang and [Extreme Shattering] for Brachydios.

I finally finished unlocking these two quests last night, so I'm looking forward to going hunting tonight!

The gold color really stands out. Lol

The Golden Lion's Fighting Spirit is activated as a series skill.

Equipping two items will unlock the level cap for the Full Strength skill, and equipping four items will unlock the level cap for the Emergency Power skill.
